The Gamification of Learning and Instruction

Praise for The Gamification of Learning and Instruction "Kapp argues convincingly that gamification is not just about adding points, levels and badges to an eLearning program, but about fundamentally rethinking learning design. He has put together a brilliant primer for learning professionals on how to gamify learning, packed with useful advice and examples."

At least 1.1m pupils speak English as a second language

Data published last year found that these pupils were now actually more likely to gain good GCSE grades in a range of academic subjects such as English, maths, science and for foreign languages. But critics warned that schools with large numbers of pupils who speak other languages may struggle to accommodate their particular needs - meaning other pupils get less attention.

How can young children best learn languages?

Children's brains are highly active Your child is unique, but what all children have in common is natural curiosity and an innate ability to learn. Our brains are dynamic and constantly active, and a baby's brain is the busiest of all. Research has shown that babies begin to understand language about twice as fast as they actually speak it.

Most Europeans can speak multiple languages. UK and Ireland not so much

Today is the European Day of Languages. Within the European Union, there are 23 officially recognised languages. There are also more than 60 indigenous regional and minority languages, and many non-indigenous languages spoken by migrant communities. That's not counting the many immigrants that call Europe home and bring their mother tongues with them.

Three-quarters of adults 'cannot speak a foreign language'

The conclusions will renew concerns over a sharp decline in foreign language lessons in schools following a controversial decision by Labour to make the subject optional for 14-year-olds for the first time in 2004. It led to a sharp decline in the number of children in England choosing to study a language GCSE, with a knock-on effect at A-level and degree standard.

How Gamification Is Reshaping The Language Learning Landscape - eLearning Industry

Keeping up with tech-savvy students has become the biggest nightmare of today's teachers. In a tech-centric world, they are struggling to abandon the old, widely spread concept of learning for the learning's sake. Moreover, they are investing a lot of effort to make their students recognize and appreciate the real-life value of traditional education.
